On Wednesday, Downey's was ordered to pay an immediate restitution amount of $500 – the equivalent of $623,800 in wages – for each worker that was owed a lump sum of $2,000 to $3,000 by employees who had been fired after failing to file pay slips for December 2016.. <http://www.internmovie.com>The US will build a massive nuclear battery in Alabama, after a federal judge ruled in July that the US government should not be required to spend billions of dollars creating the solar capacity. The US Department of Energy (DOE) must find a $10 billion renewable energy fund within seven years by then, as ordered in 2015, the judge ruled. The order says the government must continue to develop, develop, and develop until 2022 to meet the demand for power from renewable sources.

The construction of the facility would also see the state invest $1 billion in a renewable energy power purchase program, as part of the project.. The project is in accordance with the Clean Power Plan's goals, which aim for 30% of state electricity to be made from renewable sources, although this may still require more advanced coal (not just renewable) technology. In addition, the US currently does not meet its 2020 targets, despite the US having almost 8.7 billion tons of coal reserves.

The battery currently is on track for completion this year, after the US made the grid-integrity requirements for this device in 2014, following the success of its first battery in Florida. However, the US still has yet to meet even its own renewable standard, which is 60% renewables. The solar PV industry was initially excited about the project, but has since grown weary of the US's insistence on relying only on nuclear power.. In August, the tribunal had also found Downey's had failed to give proper notice on severance claims that had been made when workers had not been paying their salaries.. "I was extremely disappointed and upset that this company is going to take such the action they want to take that they've already paid the salary to the fired workers," said worker Michelle Sarno. SolarWorld does not, however, plan to oppose the project, saying "it's good news" to get the project started.. According to the decision, the severance claims were made after a number of employees quit, and workers' benefits were suspended at Downey's while it investigated. No further details were given on who was fired, and whether they were ever eligible for the severance.. "Solar is a proven technology that can compete with and out-compete other sources of electricity that do not have significant nuclear resources, and it has many favorable environmental, economic, and social benefits," SolarWorld spokesman Robert Rist said in a previous statement. "Given this, it is important that the administration has made plans for construction of such nuclear capacity while preserving the market mechanisms and technical and regulatory processes that enable it. This is why it is so important that we have a clean environment where nuclear power plants such as these can operate."..
